Jungle survival

On 24 December, 1971, 17-year-old Juliane Kopcke got on a plane with her mother in Lima, Peru, to fly to another city to meet her father. Over the Amazon jungle, there was a thunderstorm. The rain fell heavily and there was a strong wind. And then lightning hit the plane at 3000 metres, and it exploded. Juliane fell quickly through the air in her seat and hit the trees hard. For three hours, she was unconscious. When she woke up, her right arm was cut, her shoulder hurt badly and she couldn't see in one eye. She was alone. But she was alive!

Juliane's father was a biologist and when she was young, he taught her how to survive in the jungle. She found a small river and walked slowly along it. 'If I follow the river', she taught, 'I'll find people'. The river also gave her clean water to drink. It was extremely hot. But the river water kept her cool. Sometimes she had to swim in the river because it was too deep to walk in. there were crocodiles in the water but they didn't attack her! There was fruit on some trees but she didn't eat –she knew it was too dangerous.

Juliane walked for the days. At night she stopped to slep because it was too dark to walk. Ten days after the crash, she found a small hut by the river. There were some woodcutters in the hut. They cleaned hers cuts carefully and the next day, they carried her down the river, and a plane took her safely back to the city of Pucallpa.

Julian was the only person who survived the plane crash. The other 91 people, including her mother, all died.

The film director, Werner Herzog, had a ticket to travel on the plane but missed it. Thirty years later, he made a documentary film called "Wings of Hope" about Juliane and her incredible story.
